Statement by H.E. Xi Jinping
President of the People’s Republic of China
At the 22nd Meeting of the Council of Heads of State of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization

Samarkand, September 16, 2022
Your Excellency President Shavkat Mirziyoyev, Colleagues,

I am delighted to attend the meeting of the Council of Heads of State of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO). I would like to thank you, President Mirziyoyev, for your warm hospitality and thoughtful arrangements. I salute Uzbekistan for the great job it has done to promote SCO cooperation in various fields during its presidency over the past year.

Samarkand, renowned as the pearl on the Silk Road, witnessed the glory of the ancient Silk Road, a route that greatly boosted the flow of goods, spread of science and technology, interaction of ideas and integration of diverse cultures on the Eurasian continent. Indeed, the ancient Silk Road has remained a historical source of inspiration for us SCO member states as we pursue peace and development.

This year marks the 20th anniversary of the SCO Charter and the 15th anniversary of the SCO Treaty on Long-Term Good-Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation. Over the years, guided by these two founding documents, we have succeeded in exploring a new path for the development of international organizations, and there is much we can draw on from SCO’s rich practices.

— Political trust. Guided by the vision of forging enduring friendship and peace among SCO member states, we respect each other’s core interests and choice of development path, and support each other in achieving peace, stability, development and rejuvenation.

— Win-win cooperation. We accommodate each other’s interests, stay true to the principle of consultation and cooperation for shared benefits, enhance synergy between our respective development strategies, and keep to the path of win-win cooperation toward common prosperity.

— Equality between nations. We are committed to the principle of equality among all countries regardless of their size, consensus-based decision-making and addressing issues through friendly consultations. We reject the practice of the strong bullying the weak or the big bullying the small.

— Openness and inclusiveness. We stand for harmonious coexistence and mutual learning among different countries, nations and cultures; dialogue among civilizations; and the seeking of common ground while shelving differences. We are ready to establish partnerships and develop win-win cooperation with other countries and international organizations that share our vision.

— Equity and justice. We are committed to the purposes and principles of the UN Charter, we tackle major international and regional issues on the basis of their merits and oppose the pursuit of one’s own agenda at the expense of other countries’ legitimate rights and interests.

These five points fully embody the Shanghai Spirit, namely, mutual trust, mutual benefit, equality, consultation, respect for diversity of civilizations and pursuit of common development. It has been shown that this spirit is the source of strength for SCO development. It is also the fundamental guide we must continue to follow in the years to come. We owe SCO’s remarkable success to the Shanghai Spirit. And we will continue to follow its guidance as we forge ahead.

Colleagues,

Human society, like the natural world, has both sunny and rainy days in its development. Our world today is undergoing accelerated changes unseen in a century, and it has entered a new phase of uncertainty and transformation. The once-in-a-century (COVID-19) pandemic has continued unabated. Regional conflicts keep flaring up. Cold War mentality and group politics are resurfacing, so are unilateralism and protectionism. Economic globalization has encountered headwinds. A deficit in peace, development, trust and governance has grown. Human society has reached a crossroads and faces unprecedented challenges.

Under these new conditions, the SCO, as an important constructive force in international and regional affairs, should keep itself well-positioned in the face of changing international dynamics, ride on the trend of the times, strengthen solidarity and cooperation, and build a closer SCO community with a shared future.

First, we need to enhance mutual support. We should strengthen high-level exchanges and strategic communication, deepen mutual understanding and political trust, and support each other in our efforts to uphold security and development interests. We should guard against attempts by external forces to instigate “color revolutions,” jointly oppose interference in other countries’ internal affairs under any pretext and hold our future firmly in our own hands.

Second, we need to expand security cooperation. A proverb in Uzbekistan goes to the effect that “With peace, a country enjoys prosperity, just as with rain, the land can flourish.” The Global Security Initiative put forward by China addresses the peace deficit and global security challenges. It calls on all countries to stay true to the vision of common, comprehensive, cooperative and sustainable security, and build a balanced, effective and sustainable security architecture. We welcome all stakeholders to get involved in implementing this initiative.

We should continue to carry out joint anti-terrorism exercises, crack down hard on terrorism, separatism, extremism and drug trafficking, as well as cyber and transnational organized crimes; and we should effectively meet the challenges in data security, biosecurity, outer space security and other non-traditional security domains. China is ready to train 2,000 law enforcement personnel for SCO member states in the next five years and establish a China-SCO base for training counter-terrorism personnel, so as to enhance capacity-building for SCO law enforcement.

The SCO should keep itself well-positioned in the face of changing international dynamics, ride on the trend of the times, strengthen solidarity and cooperation and build a closer SCO community with a shared future.
We should ensure that the SCO-Afghanistan contact group and the mechanism of coordination and cooperation among Afghanistan’s neighbors continue to play their roles; and we should encourage Afghan authorities to establish a broad-based and inclusive political structure, and remove the ground that breeds terrorism.

Third, we need to deepen practical cooperation. Our shared goal is to deliver a better life for people of all countries in the region. The Global Development Initiative launched by China aims to focus global attention on development, foster global development partnership, and achieve more robust, greener and more balanced global development. China is ready to work with all other stakeholders to pursue this initiative in our region to support the sustainable development of regional countries.

We need to implement the two statements on safeguarding international energy and food security to be adopted by this summit, and better protect energy and food security. China will provide developing countries in need with emergency humanitarian assistance of grain and other supplies worth RMB 1.5 billion.

We welcome the Comprehensive Plan for the Implementation of the SCO Treaty on Long-Term Good-Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation for 2023-2027 to be adopted at this summit. We should fully implement cooperation documents in such areas as trade and investment, infrastructure building, supply chain protection, scientific and technological innovation and artificial intelligence to be adopted within the framework of the summit. It is important to continue our efforts to achieve Belt and Road Initiative complementarity with national development strategies and regional cooperation initiatives, expand sub-multilateral cooperation and sub-regional cooperation, and create more cooperation drivers.

We need to ensure implementation of the roadmap for SCO member states to expand shares of local currency settlement, better develop the system for cross-border payment and settlement in local currencies and work for the establishment of an SCO development bank in order to speed up regional economic integration. Next year, China will host an SCO ministers’ meeting on development cooperation, and an industrial and supply chain forum, and will set up the China-SCO Big Data Cooperation Center to create new engines of common development. China stands ready to carry out space cooperation with all other parties and provide satellite data service support in agricultural development, connectivity, and disaster mitigation and relief.

Fourth, we need to enhance people-to-people and cultural exchanges. They promote integration among civilizations, which, in turn, enable civilizations to advance. We should deepen cooperation in such areas as education, science and technology, culture, health, media, radio and television; ensure the continued success of signature programs such as the youth exchange camp, the women’s forum, and technology, culture, health, media, radio and television; and support the SCO Committee on Good-Neighborliness, Friendship and Cooperation and other non-official organizations in playing their due roles. China will build a China-SCO ice and snow sports demonstration zone and host SCO forums on the poverty reduction and sustainable development, as well as the sister cities forum next year. In the next three years, China will perform 2,000 free cataract operations for SCO member states and provide 5,000 human resource training opportunities.

Fifth, we need to uphold multilateralism. The obsession with forming a small circle can only push the world toward division and confrontation. We should remain firm in safeguarding the UN-centered international system and the international order based on international law, practice common human values and reject zero-sum games and bloc politics. We should expand SCO exchanges with other international and regional organizations such as the UN, so as to jointly uphold true multilateralism, improve global governance and ensure that the international order is more just and equitable.

Colleagues,
The Eurasian continent is home to us all. Upholding its peace and development is the shared goal of countries both in our region and the world at large, and the SCO shoulders an important responsibility in meeting this goal. In recent years, an increasing number of countries have applied to join our SCO family. This fully demonstrates the power of SCO’s vision and the widely shared confidence in its future. By promoting the development and expansion of the SCO and giving full play to its positive impact, we will create strong momentum and new dynamism for ensuring durable peace and common prosperity of the Eurasian continent and the whole world. China supports advancing SCO expansion in an active yet prudent manner, which includes going through the procedure to admit Iran as a member state, launching the procedure for Belarus’ accession, admitting Bahrain, the Maldives, the United Arab Emirates, Kuwait and Myanmar as dialogue partners, and granting relevant applying countries the legal status due them. We need to seize the opportunity to build consensus, deepen cooperation and jointly create a bright future for the Eurasian continent.

Here I wish to express China’s congratulations to India on assuming the next SCO presidency. We will, together with other member states, support India during its presidency.

Colleagues,
This year, amid a complex and challenging development environment both at home and abroad, China has stayed committed to the general principle of making advances while maintaining stable performance, striving to ensure both effective COVID-19 containment, economic stability and development security. We have continued to respond to COVID-19 and promote economic and social development in a well-coordinated way. Thus, to the greatest extent possible, we have both safeguarded the life and health of the people and ensured overall economic and social development. The fundamentals of China’s economy, characterized by strong resilience, enormous potential, ample room for policy adjustment and long-term sustainability, will remain sound. This will greatly boost the stability and recovery of the world economy and provide more market opportunities for other countries.

Next month, the Communist Party of China (CPC) will convene its 20th National Congress. It will be an important meeting at a critical time, as China embarks on a new journey toward its second centenary goal of building a modern socialist country in all respects. At this national congress, the CPC will fully review major achievements and valuable experience gained in China’s reform and development efforts. It will also formulate action programs and overarching policies to meet China’s new development goals on the journey ahead in the new era and with the people’s new expectations. We will continue to follow the Chinese path to modernization to achieve the rejuvenation of the Chinese nation and promote the building of a community with a shared future for humanity. By doing so, we will create new opportunities for the world with new advances in China’s development, and contribute our vision and strength to world peace and development, and human progress.

Colleagues,

Long as the journey is, we will surely reach our destination when we stay the course. Let us act in the Shanghai Spirit, work for steady SCO development and jointly build our region into a peaceful, stable, prosperous and beautiful home!

Thank you.

Chairman Li Zhanshu stresses China advocates multipolar world, Far East cooperation
i Zhanshu, chairman of the National People’s Congress Standing Committee, voiced China’s support for a multipolar world and regional cooperation in the Far East at the plenary session of the 7th Eastern Economic Forum (EEF) on September 7 in a speech titled, “Advance the Process of World Multipolarization and Open a New Chapter in Regional Cooperation.”

Russian President Vladimir Putin, Myanmar’s State Administration Council Chairman Min Aung Hlaing, Mongolian Prime Minister Luvjannamsrai Oyun-Erdene and Armenian Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan also addressed the event in person in the Russian city of Vladivostok.

Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi, Malaysian Prime Minister Ismail Sabri Yaakob and Vietnamese Prime Minister Pham Minh Chinh all delivered video messages.

Li recalled that at the invitation of Putin, Chinese President Xi Jinping has participated in the EEF twice and delivered significant speeches, expounding on China’s proposals and initiatives on developing China-Russia relations, promoting mutually beneficial regional cooperation, and maintaining regional peace and stability, eliciting a warm response from the international community.

The EEF theme this year, “On the Path to a Multipolar World,” was right on time, Li noted, adding that a multipolar world is the trend of history and the common expectation of the international community.

Since last year, he said, Xi has put forward the Global Development Initiative (GDI) and the Global Security Initiative (GSI), which have received support from international organizations, such as the United Nations, and many countries such as Russia. They have injected stability and positive energy into the world and contributed Chinese wisdom and solutions to solving international problems.

China will continue to work with the international community and take sustained and strong measures to ensure that the two initiatives take root and bear fruit, so as to bring tangible benefits to people around the world, Li said.

In February, Xi and Putin reached many significant consensuses on expanding all-round practical cooperation between China and Russia, as well as practicing global governance featuring extensive consultation, joint contribution and shared benefits, Li noted.

With China as an important Russian partner in developing the Far East, bilateral cooperation is an important element initiated and promoted by the two heads of state, he said.

China will further strengthen all-round cooperation with Russia in trade, energy, agriculture, infrastructure construction, science and technology, education, medical treatment and culture, Li said, adding that China will continue to support and participate in the development of Russia’s Far East, advance the deep docking between the full revitalization of northeast China and Russia’s national strategy of Far East development and promote fruitful cooperation between the two countries in the Far East.

Since Northeast Asia is one of the most dynamic regions in the world, intensifying Far Eastern development and cooperation will open up important opportunities for promoting regional security and development, he stressed.

The top Chinese legislator put forward a three-point proposal.

First, the GSI should be implemented to maintain regional peace and stability. In order to build a harmonious and peaceful common home, all parties must work together. They should uphold the vision of common, comprehensive, cooperative and sustainable security; pursue dialogue rather than confrontation; seek partnership rather than alliance; work for unity rather than division; adhere to the principle of the indivisibility of security; and inject positive energy into regional peace and stability.

Second, the GDI needs to be carried out to promote regional openness and integration. Efforts should be made to boost partnerships; pool resources and platforms for cooperation; strengthen development policy connectivity; tap innovative growth potential; maintain secure and unimpeded industrial and supply chains; and foster a more stable, secure, and free trade and investment environment in order to inject new impetus into economic globalization.

Third, development strategies should be synergized to enhance China-Russia cooperation in the Far East. China will comprehensively implement the important consensuses reached by Xi and Putin, work actively to synergize the Belt and Road Initiative and the Eurasian Economic Union, and enrich the content of Far Eastern cooperation. To this end, the legislatures of the two countries should step up coordination to provide legislative guarantees.

China firmly supports and actively promotes a multipolar world, Li said, adding that it stands ready to work with Russia and other countries in the region to deepen Belt and Road cooperation, write a magnificent chapter of regional cooperation in Northeast Asia and make unremitting efforts to promote the building of a community with a shared future for humanity.

During the question and answer session, Li addressed questions about current China-Russia relations and the prospects of Far East bilateral cooperation.

In addition, Li met with Oleg Kozhemyako, governor of Russia’s Primorye Territory, on the morning of September 8, and visited an art and cultural complex in Vladivostok, which China helped construct. (Xinhua)

Li Zhanshu, chairman of China’s National People’s Congress (NPC) Standing Committee, paid official goodwill visits to Russia, Mongolia, Nepal and the Republic of Korea (ROK) from September 7 to 17 at the invitation of Chairman of the Russian State Duma Vyacheslav Volodin, Chairman of the State Great Hural (Parliament) of Mongolia Gombojav Zandanshatar, Speaker of Nepal’s House of Representatives Agni Sapkota and ROK National Assembly Speaker Kim Jin-pyo.

Visit to Russia

Li paid an official goodwill visit to Russia from September 7 to 10, during which he met with Russian President Vladimir Putin in the country’s far eastern city of Vladivostok, held talks with Volodin and Russian Federation Council Speaker Valentina Matviyenko in Moscow, and met with leaders of the five State Duma factions.

Li conveyed cordial greetings and best wishes to Putin from President Xi Jinping and said that under the strategic guidance and personal efforts of Xi and Putin, the China-Russia comprehensive strategic partnership of coordination for a new era maintains a strong development momentum.

Political mutual trust, strategic coordination and pragmatic cooperation between the two countries have reached an unprecedented level, setting a good example of good-neighborly friendship and win-win cooperation between major neighboring countries, Li said.

Both China and Russia are at a critical historical stage of development and revitalization, enjoying great potential and broad prospects for cooperation, he added.

China is willing to continue to work with Russia to firmly support each other on issues regarding their core interests and major concerns, implement the Global Development Initiative (GDI) and Global Security Initiative (GSI) put forward by Xi and turn high-level political mutual trust into more pragmatic cooperation results, Li said.

The top Chinese legislator said he firmly believes that under the leadership of Xi and Putin, the two sides will raise the bilateral ties to a new level, follow a development path in line with their national conditions and achieve the great goals for their respective development and national rejuvenation.

Li also congratulated Russia on successfully hosting the 7th Eastern Economic Forum and briefed leaders on the upcoming 20th National Congress of the Communist Party of China (CPC).

Putin asked Li to convey his best wishes to Xi, highlighting that the Russia-China comprehensive strategic partnership of coordination for a new era is special and important, and that the Russian side is currently satisfied with bilateral relations and cooperation with China in various fields.

Russia-China trade, especially against the backdrop of the COVID-19 pandemic, has shown a sound growth momentum, Putin said, expressing his belief that the two sides will achieve greater cooperation goals in this area.

More exchanges between the Russian and Chinese legislatures will play a positive role in promoting the development of bilateral relations, Putin said and wished the 20th National Congress of the CPC success.

During his talks with Volodin and Matviyenko, Li said that the important task of cooperation between the two countries’ legislative bodies is to promote the implementation of the important consensus reached by the two heads of state and provide legal protection for the healthy and stable development of bilateral relations.

The NPC will continue to deepen exchanges and cooperation with the Russian State Duma and Federation Council, tap the mechanism potential for regular exchanges, maintain a good high-level exchange momentum and promote exchanges among friendship groups and special committees, Li said.

The top legislator stated that the NPC is ready to work with the two institutions to create a favorable environment for practical cooperation through legislation, as well as treaty and agreement examination and approval.

He added that the two sides should strengthen experience exchanges on national governance and legislation regarding the fight against external interference, sanctions and long-arm jurisdiction, among other issues. Li also thanked the Russian side for firmly supporting China on the Taiwan question.

Both China and Russia are at a critical historical stage of development and revitalization, enjoying great potential and broad prospects for cooperation.

Both Volodin and Matviyenko once again condemned Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives Nancy Pelosi’s provocative visit to China’s Taiwan region, saying that Russia firmly adheres to the one-China principle and is willing to deepen cooperation with China on the basis of mutual respect, equality and mutual benefit.

Volodin said that the legislative bodies of Russia and China should further upgrade their cooperation, expand cooperation models and enrich cooperation content, so as to jointly implement the important consensus reached by the two heads of state and contribute to the development of bilateral relations.

Matviyenko congratulated China on the great achievements made by the Chinese people under CPC leadership. She said that the in-depth development of Russia-China relations has given the legislative bodies a new task of cooperation, adding that both sides should actively promote cooperation in such areas as politics, economy, trade, finance and youth, and enhance sub-national, people-to-people exchanges and cultural cooperation.

During his meeting with leaders of the five State Duma factions, Li said that all the groups have demonstrated their support of enhancing friendly cooperation with China, showing that it is the broad consensus of all parties and people from all walks of life in Russia to develop the China-Russia comprehensive strategic partnership of coordina-
China is ready to maintain close contact and exchanges with all parties in Russia to consolidate the foundation of the friendship and practical cooperation between the two countries, he said.

Leaders of the five State Duma factions expressed their willingness to play an active role in intensifying interparty exchanges between Russia and China, and make unremitting efforts to deepen the development of Russia-China relations so as to benefit the two countries and their people.

During his stay in Moscow, Li also laid a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and visited Vladimir Lenin’s former residence.

Li paid an official goodwill visit to Mongolia from September 10 to 12, during which he met with Mongolian President Ukhnaa Khurelsukh and Prime Minister Luvsan纳米srai Oyun-Erdene, and held talks with Gombojav Zandanshatar, Mongolia’s parliamentary speaker.

During his meeting with the Mongolian president, Li conveyed cordial greetings and best wishes from Xi, noting that China and Mongolia are good neighbors that cannot be moved apart or exchanged for gold. He said that developing a good-neighborly friendship is in line with the fundamental China has always upheld the neighborhood policy of amity, sincerity, mutual benefit and inclusiveness and has been actively developing its friendly cooperative relationship with Mongolia.

and long-term interests of the two countries.

Under the strategic guidance of Xi and Mongolian leaders, the China-Mongolia comprehensive strategic partnership has been continuously lifted to higher levels, Li added.

Since the onset of COVID-19, the two sides have joined hands to fight the epidemic and gifted one another with sheep and tea, which has become a much-told story attesting to their friendship, he said.

Li noted that China has always upheld a neighborly policy of amity, sincerity, mutual benefit and inclusiveness, actively developing its friendly cooperative relationship with Mongolia.

He expressed the hope that the two sides will further deepen political mutual trust, continue to firmly support each other on the issues related to their core interests and major concerns, strengthen coordination and cooperation in international and regional affairs, and push forward multilateral and bilateral win-win cooperation.

Khurelsukh asked Li to convey his sincere greetings to Xi, stressing that Mongolia is sincerely happy about the historic achievements made in the cause of socialism with Chinese characteristics under the leadership of Xi and the CPC.

Noting that the Mongolia-China friendly cooperation is a model for the development of state-to-state relations, Khurelsukh expressed the hope that the two sides will strengthen high-level exchanges, deepen political mutual trust, and expand exchanges and cooperation in various fields, so as to push bilateral relations to higher levels and jointly promote the development of the two countries, along with Asian prosperity and stability.

Khurelsukh added that the exchanges between the legislative bodies of the two countries are of great significance to deepening the good-neighborly friendship between Mongolia and China, and enriching their comprehensive strategic partnership.

During his meeting with Oyun-Erdene, Li said that it is the common goal of China and Mongolia to develop the economy, improve people’s livelihood, strengthen their countries and enrich the people, adding that the two countries enjoy distinct economic complementarities and huge cooperation potential.

China is willing to strengthen development strategic alignment with Mongolia, along with policy communication and coordination, further promote infrastructure connectivity and the process of regional integration, he said.

China stands ready to work with Mongolia on customs clearance at ports amid pandemic conditions, implement existing cooperation projects, carry out green energy cooperation and expand trade exchanges to realize coordinated development and mutual benefit, he said. In addition, the two sides should strengthen exchanges and cooperation between political parties and young people, and conduct cultural exchanges, Li noted.

For his part, Oyun-Erdene said that developing good-neighborly friendship and mutually beneficial cooperation with China is one of the primary goals of Mongolia’s foreign policy, while China’s rapid development is a great opportunity for Mongolia’s development and revitalization.

Mongolia is willing to actively deepen cooperation in the fields of economy and trade, logistics, ports, resources and education; and promote the alignment between Mongolia’s New Revival Policy and the China-proposed Belt and Road Initiative, he said.

During the talks with Zandanshatar, Li said that China and Mongolia should be good neighbors carrying out frequent visits, good friends conducting mutually-beneficial cooperation, and partners in multilateral cooperation, in order to better benefit the two countries and their peoples.

The legislative bodies of the two countries should actively implement the important consensus reached by their leaders, strengthen experience exchanges in state governance and legislative work, and provide legal safeguards for promoting bilateral cooperation in various fields, Li said.

In addition, the two countries should strengthen coordination on multilateral platforms, such as the Inter-Parliamentary Union, and speak with one voice on upholding multilateralism and improving the global governance system from the perspective of legislative bodies, he emphasized.

For his part, Zandanshatar said that friendly exchanges between the legislative bodies of the two countries are an important part of bilateral relations. He expressed the hope that the two legislative bodies will deepen exchanges between their special committees and friendship groups.

He also noted that the State Great Hural of Mongolia is ready to make positive efforts to enhance political mutual trust between Mongolia and China, promote practical cooperation and deepen the friendship between the people of the two countries.

Li briefed the Mongolian side on the upcoming 20th National Congress of the CPC, while the Mongolian side wished the CPC 20th National Congress success.

The Mongolian side also noted that it will firmly adhere to the one-China principle, actively support the GDI and the GSI proposed by Xi, and is willing to make joint efforts with the Chinese side to push for new development of the Mongolia-China comprehensive strategic partnership.

During his visit, Li also toured the Mongolian nomadism grassland and ecological areas.

Visit to Nepal

Li paid an official goodwill visit to Nepal from September 12 to 15, during which he met with Nepalese President Bidya Devi Bhandari and Prime Minister Sher Bahadur Deuba, and held talks with Sapkota and the Chairman of the Nepal National Assembly Ganesh Prasad Timilsina.

During his meeting with Bhandari, Li conveyed cordial greetings and best wishes from Xi and noted that China and Nepal are linked by mountains and rivers, while the two people have enjoyed friendly relations for generations.

Xi paid a historic state visit to Nepal in 2019, during which the two heads of state elevated the China-Nepal relationship to a strategic partnership of cooperation featuring everlasting friendship for development and prosperity, offering strategic guidance for the long-term development of bilateral ties, Li said.

He thanked the Nepalese side for unswervingly adhering to the one-China principle, and supporting China’s position on the Taiwan question and issues concerning Tibet, Xinjiang and human rights.

China will continue to firmly support Nepal’s efforts to safeguard its sovereign independence and territorial integrity, in order to achieve prosperity and strength, Li stressed.

He welcomed the Nepalese side to actively participate in the GDI and GSI, and congratulated Nepal for its upcoming National Day on September 20.

Bhandari asked Li to convey her sincere regards to Xi, adding that Xi’s visit to Nepal in 2019 was a milestone in the history of the two countries’ bilateral relations.

China has always been Nepal’s most reliable good friend and partner, she said, expressing gratitude to China for its selfless help regarding economic and social development, earthquake rescue and relief, and the fight against COVID-19.

With its rapid development, China has become a model of global development and has played an important role in safeguarding world peace and stability, she noted.

Bhandari expressed hope that Nepal and China will strengthen practical cooperation in various fields and push forward the implementation of important projects.

During his meeting with Deuba, Li said China has always regarded Nepal as a priority in neighborhood diplomacy. The two sides should continue to understand and support each other on issues concerning their core interests and major concerns, and jointly uphold true multilateralism.

Li called for advancing high-quality Belt and Road cooperation; strengthening exchanges and cooperation in trade and investment, infrastructure, customs clearance and other areas; and jointly building the Trans-Himalayan Multi-dimensional Connectivity Network to bring tangible benefits to the people of both countries.

For his part, Deuba said that both Nepal and China have upheld the Five Principles of Peaceful Coexistence, while bilateral ties have enjoyed a solid political foundation. Nepal’s development transformation needs China’s support and help, he added.

Nepal is ready to strengthen friendly exchanges with China at various levels and expand practical cooperation in areas such as the economy, people’s livelihood, education, tourism and culture, so as to realize common development and prosperity, Deuba said.

In his separate meetings with Sapkota and Timilsina, Li said China’s NPC is ready to work with Nepal’s parliament to implement the important consensus reached between the leaders of the two countries, promote closer exchanges between their special committees and friendship groups, strengthen exchanges on governance experience and provide legal support for practical cooperation between the two countries.

Sapkota said China’s foreign policies have fully embodied the notion of win-win cooperation underlined by Xi, expressing his hope that the legislatures of the two countries will further their close exchanges and promote the implementation of projects in connectivity, livelihood improvement and other areas.

Timilsina said Nepal’s parliament actively supports Belt and Road construction and is willing to learn from China’s experience in economic and social development, as well as in poverty alleviation.

Li briefed the Nepalese side on the upcoming 20th CPC National Congress, while the Nepalese leaders said that as a friendly neighboring country, Nepal is happy with the great development achievements of the Chinese people under CPC leadership.

Under the leadership of Xi, general secretary of the CPC Central Committee, China will surely be able to successfully realize the second centenary goal, they said, adding that they wish the 20th CPC National Congress success.

The Nepalese leaders unanimously reiterated that Nepal has always firmly adhered to the one-China principle and will not allow any force to use Nepalese territory for anti-Chinese activities or harm China’s interests.

During his visit to Nepal, Li also met separately with KP Sharma Oli, chairman of the Communist Party of Nepal (Unified Marxist-Leninist), and chairman of the Communist Party of Nepal (Maoist Center) Pushpa Kamal Dahal (Prachanda).

Li also signed a memorandum of understanding with Sapkota on cooperation between the NPC of China and Nepal’s House of Representatives, met with Nepalese Foreign Minister Narayan Khadka and visited the Bhaktapur Durbar Square, which is undergoing post-quake reconstruction.

Visit to ROK

Li paid an official goodwill visit to the ROK from September 15 to 17, during which he met with President Yoon Suk-yeol and held talks with Kim in Seoul.

During his meeting with the ROK president, Li conveyed cordial greetings and best wishes from Xi. Noting that this year marks the 30th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic ties between China and the ROK, Li recalled that Xi and Yoon exchanged congratulatory messages, summing up the achievements and important experience in the development of China-ROK relations and jointly pointing out the direction for the development of bilateral ties.

China always places importance on its relations with the ROK, and is ready to step up communication with the country, grasp the general trend, eliminate disturbances, focus on cooperation and consolidating friendship, so as to jointly push for the steady and sustained development of bilateral relations to better benefit the two countries and their people, Li said.

Stressing that economic and trade cooperation is an important highlight of bilateral relations, he urged the two sides to further deepen cooperation, enhance synergy between their development strategies, conclude the second phase of China-ROK free trade agreement negotiations soon, ensure the security and stability of industrial and supply chains, and jointly uphold the rules-based free trade system.

The friendly feelings between the two people are the basis for the development of bilateral ties, Li said, calling on the two sides to further strengthen exchanges between the people, media and think tanks to enhance mutual understanding and friendship.

He also noted that properly handling sensitive issues is crucial to ensuring the healthy and steady development of China-ROK relations, adding that China is willing to work with the ROK to enhance communication and coordination on major regional and global issues, and jointly contribute to regional and world peace, stability, development and progress.

Yoon asked Li to convey his sincere regards to Xi and recounted that on the 30th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between the ROK and China, he exchanged congratulatory letters with Xi to review the development of bilateral ties and confirm the will to further develop bilateral relations over the next 30 years.

Since the establishment of diplomatic ties, ROK-China relations have made great progress, with fruitful results from exchanges and cooperation in economy, trade, culture and other fields, Yoon said, expressing hope that both sides will strengthen high-level exchanges as well as dialogue and communication at all levels, adhere to mutual benefit, expand common interests and promote bilateral relations to achieve tangible results.

Yoon also expressed hope that the two sides will enhance the friendship between the two people, especially among the younger generation, and conduct cultural and sports exchanges more frequently, as well as cooperate closely on international and regional affairs, so as to promote ROK-China relations to make greater progress in the next 30 years.

In his meeting with Kim, Li said China and the ROK are friendly neighbors and important cooperation partners, adding that the GDI and the GSI have received a positive response from the international community.

China’s NPC is willing to work with the ROK National Assembly to promote practical cooperation in various fields and push for the sustained, healthy and steady development of China-ROK relations, Li said.

Both sides should make good use of this regular exchange mechanism, enhance its relevance and effectiveness, and provide legal safeguards for deepening mutually beneficial cooperation in various fields, he added.

The two sides should learn from each other in developing the economy and improving people’s livelihood, encourage more young people to participate in China-ROK exchanges and create a good atmosphere for cementing the social foundation and public support for friendship between the two countries, he added.

Kim said that the legislative bodies of the two countries have maintained close contact and played an important role in promoting ROK-China relations.

The National Assembly is willing to strengthen exchanges with the NPC and make positive contributions as a legislative body to advancing bilateral economic and trade cooperation, maintaining the security of industrial and supply chains, protecting the environment and addressing climate change, maintaining peace and stability on the Korean Peninsula, expanding cultural exchanges and enhancing friendship between the people of the two countries, he said. After their meeting, Li and Kim attended a joint press conference.

During the visit, Li also met with former speaker of the National Assembly Park Byeong-seug and friendly personnel from various sectors, and visited the LG Science Park, an LG Group research and development center in Seoul.

Li said China has always been an architect of world peace, a contributor to global development and a defender of international order.

Noting that China-ROK ties, which have enjoyed a solid foundation, have met the condition for higher-level development, Li said China is ready to make joint efforts with the ROK to promote amity and friendship among the two people by taking the opportunity of the 30th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic ties and the China-ROK Year of Cultural Exchanges. The two sides also exchanged views on issues of common concern, including the situation on the Korean Peninsula. (Xinhua)
Senior Chinese legislator attends G20 Parliamentary Speakers’ Summit

Chen Zhu, vice chairman of National People’s Congress Standing Committee, led a delegation to the 8th Group of 20 (G20) Parliamentary Speakers’ Summit held in the Indonesian capital Jakarta on October 5-7.

In his keynote speech, Chen said that exchanges and deeper cooperation among legislative bodies are a positive impetus for the G20 to play its role.

Parliaments should uphold multilateralism and safeguard international equity and justice, adhere to openness and inclusiveness to jointly promote sustainable development of the world economy, and pursue green and low-carbon development to promote harmonious coexistence between humanity and nature, Chen said.

During the summit, he also met with Indonesia’s House of Representatives speaker Puan Maharani, speaker of the Federal National Council of the United Arab Emirates Saqr Ghubash, Suriname’s National Assembly chairman Marinus Bee and president of the Inter-Parliamentary Union Duarte Pacheco. (Xinhua)
NPC Standing Committee spokesperson condemns U.S. House speaker Pelosi’s provocative visit to China’s Taiwan region
On behalf of the National People’s Congress (NPC) Standing Committee, a spokesperson for the NPC Standing Committee condemned the visit to China’s Taiwan region by Nancy Pelosi, speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives on August 2. The following is the full text of the remarks:

On August 2, in disregard of China’s solemn representations and firm opposition, U.S. House speaker Nancy Pelosi went ahead with her visit to China’s Taiwan region. The move gravely violated the one-China principle and the stipulations of the three China-U.S. joint communiques, undermined China’s sovereignty and territorial integrity, impacted the political foundation of China-U.S. relations, and sent a seriously wrong signal to “Taiwan independence” separatist forces. China’s NPC firmly opposes and strongly condemns the move.

There is only one China in the world, and Taiwan is an inalienable part of China’s territory. The government of the People’s Republic of China is the sole legal government representing the whole of China. The one-China principle is the premise for the establishment of diplomatic relations between China and the United States, and the political foundation of China-U.S. relations. The United States has made a solemn commitment to China on the Taiwan question. But in real action, it has constantly upgraded substantive relations and official exchanges with Taiwan, emboldened and supported “Taiwan independence” separatist forces, attempted to use Taiwan to contain China and severely undermined the peace and stability across the Taiwan Straits. The Chinese government and the Chinese people have taken and will continue to take resolute and forceful measures to firmly safeguard China’s sovereignty, security and development interests.

The Taiwan question bears on China’s sovereignty and territorial integrity. For China, there is zero room for compromise and not an inch to give. The Anti-Secession Law made clear stipulations on major issues, including upholding the one-China principle, deterring separatist moves toward “Taiwan independence” and opposing interference in the Taiwan question by external forces. The stance of the Chinese government and people on the Taiwan question has been consistent. It is the firm will of over 1.4 billion Chinese people to resolutely safeguard China’s national sovereignty and territorial integrity. Any attempt to obstruct China’s complete reunification and great national rejuvenation is doomed to fail. (Xinhua)

There is only one China in the world, and Taiwan is an inalienable part of China’s territory.

What did US say in the three China-US joint communiques?

The Taiwan question is the core issue of China-US relations. The one-China principle is the political bedrock of China-US ties. 41 years of history after China and US established diplomatic relations has shown China-US relations can develop in a healthy and stable way only when the Taiwan question is handled well.

The US has made solemn commitments to China on the Taiwan question in three China-US joint communiques.

Joint Communique in 1972
“The United States acknowledges that all Chinese on either side of the Taiwan Strait maintain there is but one China and that Taiwan is a part of China. The United States Government does not challenge that position.”

Joint Communique in 1978
“The United States of America recognizes the Government of the People’s Republic of China as the sole legal Government of China. The Government of the United States of America acknowledges the Chinese position that there is but one China and Taiwan is part of China.”

Joint Communique in 1982
“The United States Government states that it does not seek to carry out a long-term policy of arms sales to Taiwan, that its arms sales to Taiwan will not exceed, either in qualitative or in quantitative terms, the level of those supplied in recent years since the establishment of diplomatic relations between the United States and China, and that it intends gradually to reduce its sale of arms to Taiwan, leading, over a period of time, to a final resolution.”

An honest country deserves respect.
It’s the US’ responsibility to keep its word.
Provocative visit draws condemnation

In disregard of China’s stern opposition, Nancy Pelosi, Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives, went to China’s Taiwan region on August 2-3. The move was a serious infringement upon China’s sovereignty and it sent a wrong signal to the separatist forces seeking “Taiwan independence.”

In response, the Chinese Government has unveiled a series of countermeasures. These include staging military drills near Taiwan, punishing organizations related to die-hard “Taiwan independence” elements, suspending the sale of natural sand, a vital construction material, to Taiwan, as well as suspending the purchase of some farm produce from the island.

Edited excerpts of official statements follow:

Wang Yi
State Councilor and Foreign Minister

Pelosi’s visit seriously violated the one-China principle, maliciously infringed on China’s sovereignty and blatantly engaged in political provocations, which has aroused strong indignation among the Chinese people and widespread opposition from the international community.

It proves once again that some U.S. politicians have become troublemakers in China-U.S. relations, and that the United States has become the biggest destroyer of peace across the Taiwan Straits and of regional stability.

The United States should not dream of obstructing China’s reunification. Taiwan is a part of China. The complete reunification of China is the trend of the times and an inevitability of history. We will leave no room for “Taiwan independence” forces and external interference.

No matter how the United States supports or connives at the “Taiwan independence” forces, it will be all in vain. The United States will only leave more ugly records of gross meddling in other countries’ internal affairs in history. The Taiwan question arose when the country was weak and chaotic, and will surely end with national rejuvenation.

The United States should not fantasize about undermining China’s development and revitalization. China has found a correct development path in line with its own national conditions. Under the leadership of the Communist Party of China (CPC), 1.4 billion Chinese people are striding toward Chinese-style modernization.

We develop our country and nation on the basis of our own strength, and are willing to coexist peacefully and develop together with other countries. But we will never allow any country to undermine China’s stability and development.

Provoking trouble on the Taiwan question in an attempt to delay China’s development and undermine China’s peaceful rise will be totally futile and will surely lead to total failure.

The United States should not fantasize about manipulating geopolitical games. Seeking peace, stability, development and win-win cooperation is the common aspiration of regional countries.

The introduction of the Taiwan question into the regional strategy by the United States, which inflates tensions and stokes confrontation, is against the trend of regional development and goes against the expectations of people in the Asia-Pacific. This is dangerous and stupid.

The one-China principle has become a basic norm governing international relations and an integral part of the post-World War II international order.

What the United States should do is immediately stop violating the purposes and principles of the UN Charter and stop playing the “Taiwan card” to disrupt the Asia-Pacific region.

The United States should not fantasize about distorting facts at will. The U.S. side claimed China is escalating the situation, but the basic facts are that the United States first provoked China on the Taiwan question and blatantly violated China’s sovereignty and territorial integrity.

The U.S. side claimed there was a precedent of the U.S. House speaker visiting Taiwan. Yet the basic truth is past mistakes cannot be used as an excuse to repeat them today.

The U.S. side claimed it cannot restrain the Congress due to the separation of powers. But the basic norm of international law is that the United States must fulfill its international obligations, and key politicians should not misbehave.

It also claimed that China’s pursuit of reunification is a “threat” to Taiwan, but the basic logic is that Taiwan is an inalienable part of China’s territory and the Taiwan question is purely an internal affair of China. It is lawful and justified that China upholds territorial integrity and opposes secession.

I want to stress that the one-China principle is the key stabilizing force for peace and stability across the Taiwan Straits, and the three China-U.S. joint communiqués (the 1972 Shanghai Communiqué, the 1979 Communiqué on the Establishment of Diplomatic Relations and the 1982 Communiqué) are the real guardrails for peaceful coexistence between China and the United States.

Clinging to the United States to seek “independence” is a dead end, and attempts to use the Taiwan question to contain China are doomed to failure.

In the face of the great cause of national reunification, the Chinese people have the guts not to be misled by fallacies or scared by evils, the ambition to never be intimidated or crushed, the determination to unite as one and the ability to resolutely safeguard national sovereignty and national dignity.

Ministry of Foreign Affairs

There is but one China in the world, Taiwan is an inalienable part of China’s territory, and the Government of the People’s Republic of China is the sole legal government representing the whole of China. This has been clearly recognized by the United Nations General Assembly Resolution 2758 of 1971. Since the founding of the People’s Republic of China in 1949, 181 countries have established diplomatic relations with China on the basis of the one-China principle. The one-China principle is a universal consensus of the international community and a basic norm in international relations.

In 1979, the United States made a clear commitment in the China-U.S. Joint Communiqué on the Establishment of Diplomatic Relations—“The United States of America recognizes the Government of the People’s Republic of China as the sole legal government of China. Within this context, the people of the United States will maintain cultural, commercial and other unofficial relations with the people of Taiwan.” Congress, as a part of the U.S. Government, is inherently obliged to strictly observe the one-China policy of the U.S. Government and refrain from having any official exchanges with China’s Taiwan region. China is all along opposed to the visit to Taiwan by U.S. congressional members, and the U.S. executive branch has the responsibility to stop such visits. Since Speaker Pelosi is the incumbent leader of the U.S. Congress, her visit to and activities in Taiwan, in whatever form and for whatever reason, are a major political provocation to upgrade U.S. official exchanges with Taiwan. China absolutely does not accept this, and the Chinese peo-
The Taiwan question is the most important and most sensitive issue at the very heart of China-U.S. relations. The Taiwan Straits are facing a new round of tensions and severe challenges, and the fundamental cause is the repeated moves by the Taiwan authorities and the United States to change the status quo.

The Taiwan authorities have kept seeking U.S. support for their “independence agenda.” They refuse to recognize the 1992 Consensus (the consensus reached in 1992 by the mainland-based Association for Relations Across the Taiwan Straits and the Taiwan-based Straits Exchange Foundation; they agreed to state that “the two sides of the Taiwan Straits both stick to the one-China principle”), go all out to push forward “de-sinicization,” and promote “incremental independence.”

The United States, for its part, has been attempting to use Taiwan to contain China. It constantly distorts, obscures and hollows out the one-China principle, steps up its official exchanges with Taiwan, and emboldens “Taiwan independence” separatist activities. These moves, like playing with fire, are extremely dangerous. Those who play with fire will perish by it.

The position of the Chinese Government and people on the Taiwan question has been consistent. It is the firm commitment of the more than 1.4 billion Chinese people to resolutely safeguard state sovereignty and territorial integrity. It is the common aspiration and sacred responsibility of all Chinese sons and daughters to realize the complete reunification of the motherland. The will of the people is not to be defied, and the trend of the times cannot be reversed. No country, no forces and no individual should ever misestimate the firm resolve, strong will and great capability of the Chinese Government and people to defend state sovereignty and territorial integrity and to achieve national reunification and rejuvenation. China will definitely take all necessary measures to resolutely safeguard its sovereignty and territorial integrity in response to the U.S. House speaker’s visit. All the consequences arising therefrom must be borne by the U.S. side and the “Taiwan independence” separatist forces.

China and the United States are two major countries. The right way for them to deal with each other lies only in mutual respect, peaceful coexistence, no-confrontation and win-win cooperation. The Taiwan question is purely an internal affair of China, and no other country is entitled to act as a judge on the Taiwan question. China strongly urges the United States to stop playing the “Taiwan card” and using Taiwan to contain China. It should stop meddling on Taiwan and interfering in China’s internal affairs. It should stop supporting and conniving at “Taiwan independence” separatist forces in any form. It should stop its acts of saying one thing but doing the opposite on the Taiwan question. It should stop distort-
The separatist attempt seeking “Taiwan independence” is the biggest obstacle to the reunification of the motherland, and poses a serious potential danger to China’s national rejuvenation. The Democratic Progressive Party (DPP) authorities have entrenched themselves in the erroneous position of “Taiwan independence,” served as a tool for anti-China forces in the United States to contain China, and become even more utterly brazen in the provocative attempt to seek “independence.” This is a total misjudgment and miscalculation of the situation.

Out of selfish motives, the DPP authorities have been headstrong in challenging the one-China principle, refused to recognize the 1992 Consensus, ignited cross-Straits confrontation, and clung to U.S. support to seek “independence.” The DPP authorities’ separatist actions and collusion with the United States, which betrays China’s national interests, will only plunge Taiwan into the abyss of disaster, and bring great suffering to Taiwan compatriots.

The reunification of the motherland and the rejuvenation of the Chinese nation have become a historical inevitability. China must be and will surely be reunified. This will not change regardless of the will of some die-hard anti-China forces in the United States or the illusion of separatist forces seeking “Taiwan independence.” The time and tide of the Chinese people have become a historical inevitability. The DPP authorities’ separatist actions and collusion with the United States, which betrays China’s national interests, will only plunge Taiwan into the abyss of disaster, and bring great suffering to Taiwan compatriots.

We urge the U.S. side to stay clear-eyed about the historical ins and outs of the Taiwan question, recognize the fact and the status quo that both sides of the Taiwan Straits belong to one and the same China, strictly abide by the one-China principle with concrete actions, implement the one-China principle with concrete actions, implement the one-China principle with concrete actions, implement the one-China principle with concrete actions, implement the one-China principle with concrete actions, implement the one-China principle with concrete actions, implement the one-China principle with concrete actions, implement the one-China principle with concrete actions, implement the three-China-U.S. joint communiqués, and refrain from sliding further down the wrong path.

We urge the DPP authorities to completely give up the separatist schemes seeking “Taiwan independence,” and stop going further down on the doomed path of “Taiwan independence” to the point of no return. Any activity seeking “Taiwan independence” will be smashed by the mighty anti-secession and pro-reunification forces of the Chinese people.

Foreign Affairs Committee of the Chinese People’s Political Consultative Conference National Committee

Regarding the Taiwan question, the current U.S. administration has on multiple occasions made the commitment to adhere to the one-China policy and not support “Taiwan independence.” However, some recent remarks and actions from the U.S. side are in stark contrast to said commitment. We urge the U.S. side to honor its words, cease any kind of official exchanges with China’s Taiwan region, stop interfering in China’s internal affairs, stop sending any wrong signal to “Taiwan independence” separatist forces, and not to go further down this dangerous path.

Ministry of National Defense

Taiwan’s DPP authorities have solicited foreign support, colluded with external forces to stir up trouble and been bent on inviting Pelosi to visit Taiwan. Such acts are very dangerous and will inevitably lead to serious consequences. The Chinese People’s Liberation Army is on high alert and will undertake a series of targeted military operations in response to resolutely safeguard China’s sovereignty and territorial integrity and resolutely thwart the interference by external forces and separatist schemes for “Taiwan independence.”

INTERNATIONAL RESPONSE

“The policy of the United Nations on this issue is that we are guided by the General Assembly Resolution 2758 from 1971 on [the] one-China [principle].”
—Stephane Dujarric, spokesperson for UN Secretary General António Guterres

“The Shanghai Cooperation Organization adheres to the one-China principle, firmly opposes interference in the internal affairs of its member states by any external force, supports all member states in safeguarding national unity and defending their own sovereignty and territorial integrity, and will continue to promote further cooperation among member states in this regard to ensure peace, security and stability in the region.”
—Ismo Morgunov, Secretary General of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization

“Pakistan reaffirms its strong commitment to the one-China policy and firmly supports China’s sovereignty and territorial integrity... Pakistan strongly believes that interstate relations should be based on mutual respect, non-interference in internal affairs, and a peaceful resolution of issues by upholding the principles of the UN Charter, international law and bilateral agreements.”

China issues new white paper on Taiwan question

China released a new white paper on August 10 to expound on the position and policies of the Communist Party of China (CPC) and the Chinese government to achieve national reunification in the new era, including the envisioning of a new special administrative region (SAR) for Taiwan.

The white paper, titled “The Taiwan Question and China’s Reunification in the New Era,” was the third on the Taiwan question in the history of the People’s Republic of China. The first two were issued in August 1993 and February 2000.

Provided that China’s sovereignty, security and development interests are guaranteed, Taiwan will enjoy a high degree of autonomy as an SAR after reunification, according to the white paper released by the Taiwan Affairs Office of the State Council and the State Council Information Office.

The white paper is a powerful countermeasure against “Taiwan independence” separatists and external interference, said Lau Siu-kai, vice president of the Chinese Association of Hong Kong and Macao Studies.

“It helps debunk the slanders by ‘Taiwan independence’ separatist forces, the United States and other Western countries, and fully demonstrates our strong will and determination to safeguard national sovereignty, territorial integrity and the fundamental interests of the Chinese nation,” Lau said.

Taiwan has belonged to China since ancient times. This statement has a sound basis in history and jurisprudence, the white paper said, adding that the one-China principle represents the universal consensus of the international community.

“We are one China, and Taiwan is part of China. This is an indisputable fact supported by history and the law. Taiwan has never been a state; its status as part of China is unalterable,” the white paper stressed.

“Never before have we been so close to, confident in and capable of achieving the goal of national rejuvenation. The same is true when it comes to our goal of complete national reunification,” the white paper continued.

A spokesperson for the Taiwan Work Office of the CPC Central Committee said the white paper demonstrated “our strong confidence toward complete national reunification, our resolute determination in fighting against separatist forces seeking ‘Taiwan independence’ and external interference, as well as our original aspiration in safeguarding the wellbeing of people on both sides of the Taiwan Straits.”
Obstacles must be removed

Blasting the Democratic Progressive Party (DPP), the white paper stated that the actions by DPP authorities have resulted in tension in cross-Strait relations, endangering peace and stability in the Taiwan Straits, and undermining the prospects and restricting the space for peaceful reunification.

“These are obstacles that must be removed in advancing the process of peaceful reunification,” it said.

External forces have encouraged and instigated provocative actions by separatist forces; these have intensified cross-Strait tension and confrontation, and undermined peace and stability in the Asia-Pacific region, the white paper asserted.

Relying on external forces will achieve nothing for Taiwan’s separatists, while using Taiwan to contain China is doomed to fail. The wheel of history rolls on toward national reunification and will not be stopped by any individual or any force, it emphasized.

Under the current complex international and cross-Strait situation, the release of the white paper is conducive to exposing the “Taiwan independence” separatist forces’ collusion with external forces in making provocations, as well as their vicious words and deeds that attempt to undermine China’s sovereignty and territorial integrity or stand in the way of its reunification, the Taiwan Work Office of the CPC Central Committee spokesperson said.

The release of the white paper is timely and targeted at “Taiwan independence” separatist activities and the interference of external forces, said Zou Zhenqiu, a national lawmaker and head of the Jiangsu provincial federation of Taiwan compatriots.

“No matter what the ‘Taiwan independence’ separatist forces and external anti-China forces may do, the fact that both sides of the Taiwan Straits belong to one and the same China will never change,” he said.

Peaceful reunification

Peaceful reunification and “one country, two systems” are our basic principles for resolving the Taiwan question and the best approach to realizing national reunification, the white paper reiterated.

“We are ready to create vast space for peaceful reunification, but we will leave no room for separatist activities in any form,” it warned.

“We will work with the greatest sincerity and exert our utmost efforts to achieve peaceful reunification. But we will not renounce the use of force and we reserve the option of taking all necessary measures. This is to guard against external interference and all separatist activities and in no way does it target our fellow Chinese in Taiwan. The use of force would be the last resort under compelling circumstances,” it explained.

“The future of Taiwan lies in China’s reunification, and the wellbeing of the people in Taiwan hinges on the rejuvenation of the Chinese nation. This is becoming a consensus among Taiwan compatriots,” said Cheng Kuang Yi, a young entrepreneur from Taiwan.

Cheng, who has lived on the mainland for 15 years, said more young people from Taiwan are coming to the mainland for study and work as the motherland provides great opportunities for their personal development. At the same time, these Taiwan compatriots have also taken an active part in the economic and social development of the mainland.

“We hope Taiwan compatriots will stand on the right side of history, be proud of their Chinese identity and fully consider the position and role of Taiwan in China’s rejuvenation,” the Taiwan Work Office of the CPC Central Committee spokesperson said.

Taiwan envisioned as new SAR

“To realize peaceful reunification, we must acknowledge that the mainland and Taiwan have their own distinct social systems and ideologies,” the white paper said. “The ‘one country, two systems’ principle is the most inclusive solution to this problem.”

It added that after peaceful reunification, Taiwan may continue its current social system and enjoy a high degree of autonomy in accordance with the law.

Taiwan’s social system and its way of life will be fully respected, while the private property, religious beliefs, and lawful rights and interests of the people in Taiwan will be fully protected. All Taiwan compatriots who support reunification of the country and rejuvenation of the nation will be the masters of the region, the white paper said.

With a powerful, supportive motherland, the people of Taiwan will enjoy greater security and dignity, and stand upright and rock-solid in the international community, the white paper added.

After reunification, foreign countries may continue to develop economic and cultural relations with Taiwan. With the approval of China’s Central Government, they may set up consulates or other official and quasi-official institutions in Taiwan, while international organizations and agencies may establish offices, relevant international conventions can be applied and relevant international conferences can be held there, according to the white paper.

Peaceful cross-Strait reunification is of benefit not only to the Chinese nation, but to all peoples and the international community as a whole, the white paper concluded. (Xinhua)
Chairman Li Zhanshu highlights law-based Yellow River protection

Li Zhanshu, chairman of the National People’s Congress (NPC) Standing Committee and member of the Standing Committee of the Political Bureau of the Communist Party of China Central Committee, stressed the need to protect the Yellow River in accordance to law and use the river to benefit the people during an inspection tour of northwest China’s Gansu Province on August 26-28.

Li visited the cities of Qingyang and Lanzhou to learn about the province’s ecological environment improvements, wetland protection work, water resource utilization, and cultural inheritance and protection of the Yellow River. He convened a symposium on legislation related to the protection of the Yellow River and listened to opinions and suggestions from relevant officials, people’s congresses deputies, experts, scholars and the public.

Yellow River legislation is an important task that has been promoted by the NPC Standing Committee in recent years, Li said, highlighting the basin-wide ecological protection of the Yellow River and its high-quality development.

Li stressed the importance of water and soil conservation, ecosystem protection and restoration, prevention and control of water pollution and water resource utilization.

He also visited a revolutionary memorial hall and an equipment manufacturing base during his inspection tour. (Xinhua)
Ensuring the Yellow River benefits the people

With the onset of frequent rain, north China’s Yellow River has entered its summer high-water season, and areas along its course are guarding against possible floods.

The Yellow River and the Yangtze River are regarded as the “mother rivers” of the Chinese nation. The Yellow River basin had been the political, economic, and cultural centers of the country for as long as 3,000 years in the 5,000-year history of the Chinese civilization.

Today, the 5,464-km-long waterway feeds 12 percent of China’s population, irrigates 17 percent of its arable land, and supplies water to more than 50 large and medium-sized cities.

However, throughout its history, the Yellow River used to suffer from frequent dike breaks and course changes.

Due to its incomparable historical, cultural and economic significance, together with the environmental impact it brings, the river and its basin must be protected and managed with the utmost effort.

This point was made clear on multiple occasions by President Xi Jinping, who attaches great importance to the ecological protection of the Yellow River.

Over the past few years, Xi, also general secretary of the Communist Party of China Central Committee and chairman of the Central Military Commission, has visited all nine provinces or autonomous regions along the Yellow River.

Along the way, he was briefed on the status and challenges in the river basin’s protection and management and made detailed instructions on the matter.

Zhang Xiaolei, an explainer at the Yellow River Museum in Zhengzhou, Henan Province, who accompanied Xi during a tour of the museum in September 2019, recalled that Xi was very knowledgeable of the history of the Chinese nation’s efforts to harness the Yellow River since ancient times.

Xi was particularly interested in the history of flood prevention, Zhang recalled. “He spent a long time in the hall dedicated to the ancient efforts to harness the Yellow River, slowing down before a map of river harnessing work from the Ming Dynasty (1368-1644) and commenting, ‘This is really extraordinary.’”

The next day, Xi noted at a meeting that the protection of the river is critical to the great rejuvenation and sustainable development of the Chinese nation, calling it a major national strategy.

Regarding the river basin’s ecological protection, Xi said that the upper, middle and lower reaches of the river need to be considered as a whole. He also stressed better use of water resources, with coordinated planning of the population and urban and industrial development to resolutely curb unreasonable demand for water.

Following Xi’s inspection, in October 2021, central authorities issued a comprehensive guideline on the ecological protection and high-quality development of the Yellow River basin through 2030 and beyond.

Later in the same month, Xi inspected the estuary of the Yellow River in Shandong Province. He commended the local efforts to improve the river’s environment, encouraging those involved to keep up the good work.

However, according to Xi, there is still much to do to further improve the river’s environment.

“We must not rest on our laurels,” he said during the inspection. “We ought to focus on solving problems, strive with renewed efforts and resolve, and push forward work on all fronts.”

To Xi, who has underscored the notion that “lucid waters and lush mountains are invaluable assets,” the Yellow River’s environmental protection must follow a holistic approach.

Mountain, river, forest, farmland, lake, grassland, and desert ecosystems must be conserved, and industry must develop in harmony with the natural environment.

In implementing the national strategy on the Yellow River, both farsighted vision and down-to-earth work are needed, Xi once said. The purpose of all these efforts is simple: to make the Yellow River benefit the people.

The Yellow River basin has seen great improvement in the ecological environment after continuous conservation efforts.

The area of soil erosion in the Yellow River basin decreased by 48 percent in 2020, compared with 1990, and that of intense soil erosion was reduced by 83 percent.

Many places, which used to be suffering from sandstorms, saline and alkali soils, and flooding as a result of the river’s dike break or course change, have shaken off poverty thanks to continuous development efforts and improvements to the environment. (Xinhua)
Li Zhanshu, chairman of the National People’s Congress Standing Committee and member of the Standing Committee of the Political Bureau of the Communist Party of China Central Committee, stressed the need for a systematic, coordinated and special protection approach in drafting a new law on the ecological protection of the Qinghai-Tibet Plateau during a research tour in southwest China’s Tibet Autonomous Region on July 12-15.

Noting the Qinghai-Tibet Plateau’s special ecological status and its value to national and global ecological security, Li said the new law should embody the idea that ecological protection is the basic premise and the rigid constraint of the region’s development.

It should also implement the new development philosophy, adhere to a systematic, science-based and problem-solving approach to strengthen the protection, conservation, restoration, and risk prevention and control of key ecological systems, he added.

During his stay in Tibet, Li also visited residential communities, Potala Palace and temples, and held talks with local lawmakers.

He also called for efforts to further implement the Party’s ethnic and religious work policies, focus on safeguarding national unification and strengthening ethnic unity, and ensure enduring social stability and long-term security and high-quality development. (Xinhua)
The National People’s Congress (NPC) Standing Committee held a joint inquiry into a report on the enforcement of the Environmental Protection Law on September 1.

During the inquiry, lawmakers asked questions focused on issues such as the protection of the ecological environment in accordance with law, the acceleration of environmental infrastructure construction and the enhancement of ecological preservation and restoration.

State Councilor Wang Yong and officials from Central Government agencies and ministries, as well as top court and procuratorate officials, attended the meeting to hear suggestions and answer questions.

Li Zhanshu, chairman of the NPC Standing Committee, noted in his speech that a review of the law enforcement showed that the country has made a series of significant achievements in environmental protection. He urged further efforts to uphold and improve law enforcement inspections related to environmental protection.

He also called for efforts to step up the formulation and revision of laws, as well as efforts to improve the socialist legal system with Chinese characteristics, with an eye on the full and effective implementation of laws.

Leading officials at all levels should develop and improve their ability to address issues and advance their work with a better understanding of the law, Li said.

During the meeting, Wang said that since the 18th National Congress of the Communist Party of China in 2012, China’s environmental protection efforts have seen sweeping, historic and transformative changes.

More importantly, the positive momentum should be consolidated, he said, adding that the State Council and relevant departments will continue to fulfill their duties, promote green, low-carbon and circular development, and ramp up the efficiency of their regulatory work and law enforcement.” (Xinhua)
The Standing Committee of the National People’s Congress (NPC) passed the newly revised Law on Quality and Safety of Agricultural Products on September 2.

The revised law strengthens the responsibilities of local authorities and business operators in ensuring the quality and safety of agricultural products during the entire process from production to consumption.

Enacted in 2006, the Law on Quality and Safety of Agricultural Products has played an important role in ensuring the food safety and boosting the rural economy. The revised law will take effect on January 1, 2023.

To the detail

Yue Zhongming, an official with the NPC Standing Committee’s Legislative Affairs Commission, said the revised law included farmers in the scope of supervision, stipulating that enterprises and cooperatives of agricultural production should be responsible for the quality and safety of agricultural products.

Food producers should check certifications and qualifications according to the Food Safety Law when they purchase agricultural products as food materials, the law said.

Given the emerging new marketing forms of agricultural product, the law also stipulated the responsibilities of online platform operators, and of people involved in the cold chain logistics, Yue said.

In the definition of the safety and quality of agricultural products, the law added that the agricultural products in the market should meet the quality and safety standards, which should be strictly implemented.

The law also stipulated the scientific use of agricultural inputs such as fertilizers and pesticides, and the control of the quality and safety from the production base.

It added safety requirements for the storage and transportation of the agricultural products, preventing secondary pollution of the products, Yue said.

The risk evaluation results of agricultural products’ quality and safety should be reported not only to market supervision and health departments, but also local bureaus of agriculture and rural affairs, according to the law.

County-level authorities of agriculture and rural affairs should improve the supervision and management of agricultural products’ quality and safety during the entire process.

The random inspection of the quality and safety of agricultural products should be improved, while samples collected should be paid for at market price, Yue said.

Wang Tiehan, chief inspector of food safety at the State Administration for Market Regulation, said that random inspections in the first half of this year showed 2.51 percent of the 2.37 million batches of food products contained substandard samples, a year-on-year increase of 0.17 percent.

“The unqualified rates in six categories including agricul-
The excessive pesticide and veterinary medicine residues on vegetables, fruits and aquatic products are among major problems found during the inspection, he added.

The revised law strengthened the punishment of illegal actions. Considering the real condition of farmers, the relatively light punishment on farmers will both deter them from wrongdoing and guide them to regulate their farming activities, Yue said.

Voices from the people

Despite strengthened regulation and supervision, there is still room for improvement, as people are increasingly concerned about the quality of the food they purchase, some believing that they might consume too much pesticide residue, or the vegetables and fruits are tasteless or don’t taste as good as before. Some industry practitioners may also sacrifice quality for short-term profit.

The upgrading of the law has been made step by step, based on changing national and industrial conditions. In 2018, some articles of law were amended. In the same year, after the NPC Standing Committee inspected several cities and regions on the enforcement of the law, it recommended that the revision of this law be made as fast as possible. Deputies to the NPC started to make targeted proposals on the revision, based on their extensive research and studies. The revision work was included in the legislative work plan for 2021.

From October 2021 to August this year, the revised drafts went under deliberation three times. Members of the NPC Standing Committee, some local governments and the public made a number of suggestions, such as ensuring stricter enforcement standards, strengthening the responsibilities of local governments and producers, as well as realizing whole-process supervision ensuring food safety from the place they were raised to the dining table of the people. They were all taken into careful consideration and some were included in the revision.

The Constitution and Law Committee conducted related research and investigation in several regions across the country in order to have a better understanding of the current situation. During these occasions, they heard local officials’ report on their work concerning agricultural products, in which the good practices they adopted and challenges they faced were all included. In addition to on-site visits to places such as farmlands, companies and factories, they also attended discussions where primary-level agricultural product safety workers and representatives from enterprises shared their views.

During a research tour in Huachuan County, Heilongjiang Province, the local practice of utilizing databases and other hi-technology means to ensure the monitoring of the entire process of agricultural production received recognition. For instance, sensors were installed for real-time monitoring of seedlings, weeding, fertilization, storage, processing and logistics. With mobile apps, people can get synchronous intelligent analysis of soil moisture, crop growth, disease and pest prevention, all ensuring the high quality of products.

“The quality and safety of agricultural products is a major issue concerning national and social interest, and it is also a complex system, which especially requires systematic governance, making all produce traceable,” said Chen Guomin, a member of the 13th NPC Standing Committee. In recent years, procuratorial organs have handled a series of cases involving the quality and safety of agricultural products in the fields of food safety, ecological environment and resource protection, protected the production areas of agricultural products, and standardized the production of agricultural products, rectified illegal acts in the packaging, labeling and sales of these products, all achieving positive results.

“What kind of methods can be used to ensure the quality and safety of agricultural products? Based on a large number of investigations and studies, I believe it is necessary to focus on three main points,” said Ji Bingxuan, vice chairperson of the NPC Standing Committee.

Ji said these points are production, storage and transportation, as well as sales. During production, pollution, pesticide residue, pests and mildew should be prevented and controlled. In terms of storage and transportation, how to retain freshness and prevent food from becoming putrid, growing mildew or getting bitten by insects are major concerns.

When the products go into the market, details concerning preservation, shelf life and packaging, among many others, should also be taken seriously, Ji believed.

“All these prominent problems affect the quality and safety of agricultural products, and we need to pay attention to solving problems in the implementation of the law,” Ji said.
Legislation gets tough with online, telecom scammers

By Cao Yin and Lu Yan

China took a major step against telecom and online fraud on September 2 by adopting widely anticipated legislation that will significantly crack down on these crimes, which have long disturbed the public and led to people’s financial losses after being deceived by spam messages and crank calls.

The law on telecom and online fraud, which has 50 articles, was passed after being reviewed three times by the Standing Committee of the National People’s Congress (NPC), aiming to offer strong protection of people’s legitimate rights and harshly punish scammers.

The law will also build a joint force by improving the governance of telecommunication, finance and Internet sectors to make the fight against fraud more effective, according to Wang Aili, an official from the NPC Standing Committee’s Legislative Affairs Commission.

“What we are doing now is to use the law to coordinate government agencies, judicial departments and enterprises in the anti-fraud fight to eliminate behaviors that will harm people’s sense of security, happiness and fulfillment as quickly as we can,” Wang added.

The law takes effect on December 1.

Shared responsibilities

Under the new law on telecom and online fraud, companies in the sectors are required, for example, to remind clients and consumers to be on alert for new types of fraud.

“Enterprises in these sectors, as well as banks and payment institutions, should shoulder responsibilities of preventing fraud risks, optimizing their internal security systems and implementing real-name registration of their users, so as to deter swindlers from the very beginning,” Wang said.

Financial institutions and non-bank payment service providers should put in place a customer due diligence system when opening bank and payment accounts and providing payment and settlement services, and should also identify the beneficial owners in accordance with the law and take risk management measures to prevent bank and payment accounts from being used in fraud, according to the law.

Telecom service providers should not issue new SIM cards to those who have already reached their limit in terms of the number of registered cards, and should double-check applicants if they spot abnormal activities.

Financial institutions and non-bank payment service providers also have the right to verify the identity of customers or reject opening service accounts for them under similar conditions, according to the law.

Defining respective responsibilities of departments, businesses and local governments in preventing and fighting telecom and online fraud, the newly passed law stipulates that departments and organizations should act in concert with each other and facilitate fast cross-sectoral and cross-regional coordination and cooperation so as to effectively curb such offenses.

It also stipulates that anti-fraud knowledge and tips should be increasingly promoted and shared in communities, schools, villages and families to further help improve awareness among the elderly and the youth, who are often easy victims.

Additionally, the new law increases penalties to scammers, clarifying that those who have engaged in such fraud and who have been criminally punished for the offense will be restricted from leaving the country.

Planning ahead

Since October 2021 to late August, the NPC Standing Committee deliberated the drafts of the law three times. During the process, multiple improvements were made. For example, the second draft added accountabilities of financial institutions, telecom service providers, Internet-based companies and the media in publicizing the anti-fraud information and tips to the public. Non-traditional payment tools and services such as digital RMB, as well as barcodes and QR codes, are also subjected to fraud detection.

After the two deliberations, the standing committee solicited opinions on the NPC official website, receiving 28,406 suggestions from more than 12,300 people.

Based on opinions from the public and all relevant parties, revisions were made in the third deliberated draft, including punitive measures for those engaged in telecommunications network fraud crimes and related crimes—their criminal record will affect their credit report, resulting in further restrictions and punishments in future activities.

Sustained efforts

As of December 2021, the number of Chinese Internet users had exceeded 1.03 billion, and the digital economy is becoming an ever more important engine driving China’s economic growth.

In roughly two decades, China’s online industry has developed at supersonic speed, leading the issue of cybersecurity to become an increasingly hot topic of social debate over the past 10 years. The government is committed to protecting the legitimate rights and interests of people in the digital sphere and has made sustained efforts in data security management and personal information protection by, for example, tightening the rules on mobile phone applications’ collection and use of personal information, and cracking down on telecom fraud. Its “cyberspace is not beyond the scope of justice” promise has been delivered, effectively guaranteeing the security of netizens’ personal information.

In a campaign not long ago, police officers in 30 provincial regions, including Guangdong, Henan and Hunan, captured more than 1,100 suspects who allegedly cheated people out of money by promoting fake online services, with over 3,000 mobile phones and computers seized at the same time, the Ministry of Public Security reported in August.

The ministry said the country saw fewer cases involving telecom and Internet fraud.

Over the past year, a total of 394,000 criminal cases involving telecom fraud have been investigated nationwide and 634,000 criminal suspects have been arrested, marking a year-on-year increase of 28.5 percent and 76.6 percent, respectively, said Du Hangwei, deputy minister of public security.

In the first 11 months of 2021, police across the country managed to intercept a total of 326.5 billion yuan ($51 billion) of funds, as well as 1.55 billion scam phone calls and 1.76 billion scam text messages during the same period, preventing 23.37 million people from falling victim to such fraud.

China vows severe punishment for trans-border telecom fraud. Authorities are committed to capturing and cracking down on key financiers of such criminal groups and relevant backbone criminals, and to the capture, extradition and repatriation of fraud scheme fugitives now on the run overseas.

In a solemn warning, the authorities urged criminals staying abroad to return and turn themselves in as soon as possible.

Meanwhile, judicial departments nationwide have been showing the public-via livestreaming, short-video apps and other readily available means—how to avoid such scams.

As some people, particularly teenagers, were defrauded by being lured to buy online game equipment, the Cyberspace Administration of China has worked with the ministry in the fight against scammers since the beginning of this year. So far, they have resolved more than 12,000 such cases and urged Internet operators to improve the channels for reporting fraud-related clues.
Grassroots stations to seek opinions

Initiative to cover all provincial regions to resolve problems through legislation

By Cao Yin

Ten more stations for soliciting legislative opinions from grassroots-level areas will soon be set up to further implement China’s “whole-process people’s democracy” and overall law-based governance, said an official with China’s top legislature.

The new “grassroots legislation opinion collection stations” will be mainly built in northeastern and western areas of China, as well as regions inhabited by ethnic groups, such as in Liaoning Province and the Ningxia Hui Autonomous Region, Yang Heqing, spokesman of the National People’s Congress Standing Committee’s Legislative Affairs Commission, told a news conference on August 26.

“Once those are built, there will be a station in every provincial region across the country,” he said.

The establishment of such stations was part of an initiative launched by the commission in July 2015 to gather suggestions from residents and then resolve their problems through legislation.

The first stations were set up in Shanghai’s Hongqiao sub-district and in standing committees of local legislative bodies in Xiangyang, Hubei Province; Jingdezhen, Jiangxi Province; and Lintao County, Gansu Province.

The success of these stations led the commission to build more in 2020 and 2021.

Such stations have played a key role in the implementation of “whole-process people’s democracy,” “as they provide a channel for people at the grassroots level to share their ideas on legislative issues and have a greater opportunity to get their voices heard by national lawmakers,” Yang said.

The concept of “whole-process people’s democracy” was first advanced by President Xi Jinping during a visit to Hongqiao in November 2019.

“With the stations, we’ll increase exchanges between residents and lawmakers to improve the quality of legislation, contributing more to carrying out the ‘whole-process people’s democracy’ and promoting governance by the rule of law in the new era,” Yang added.

Recalling legislative efforts over the past decade, he said that they have always upheld the Constitution, with more focus on making and revising laws on national security, healthcare, environment, education and technology.

Meanwhile, a few laws regarding new industries, including those on Internet data and biosecurity, and the legislation involving foreign affairs, have also been unveiled, “which means remarkable progress has been made in improving the socialist legal system with Chinese characteristics,” he said.

Since the 18th National Congress of the Communist Party of China in 2012, the NPC and its standing committee have made 69 laws and 237 amendments, he said.

The country has seen achievements in legislation in the past 10 years, and its optimization of the legal system has never stopped.
Top legislature better at collecting public opinion

By Cao Yin

China’s top legislature has established more channels for the public to participate in national governance over the past decade, guaranteeing that the people are the masters of the country, officials said.

The National People’s Congress (NPC) and its standing committee have set up a system for regularly soliciting public opinion, and have collected more than 3.8 million suggestions on draft laws from people from all walks of life in the past 10 years, Song Rui, director of the research department with the NPC Standing Committee’s General Office, told a news conference on June 29.

He said they also designated 22 sites, including colleges and subdistricts, as grassroots stations to collect people’s ideas and suggestions on legislation, “which is like a nonstop train that can take residents’ advice directly to the top legislature.”

Additionally, the NPC Standing Committee has built information platforms and legal databases to increase the means of collecting public opinion, and allowing people to take part in legislation, Song said.

“Enabling people to be broadly involved in democratic activities and giving them ways to fully share ideas play a big role in guaranteeing the people are the masters of the country and implementing whole-process people’s democracy,” he said.

The top legislature has also forged closer ties with NPC deputies, inviting them to attend NPC Standing Committee sessions as well as arranging for them to participate in legislative surveys and inspections of law enforcement, he said.

He added that in the past five years, 4,648 motions and 84,028 suggestions provided by deputies were read and handled, helping solve a series of problems of concern to the public.

Wang Tiemin, deputy secretary-general of the NPC Standing Committee, told the media on June 29 that the top legislature has passed 69 new laws and amended 237 since the 18th National Congress of the Communist Party of China in 2012, with the adoption of 99 major legal decisions.

“Those laws were made to meet people’s increasing and urgent legal demands, and also to contribute to the country’s development and major reforms,” he said.

In the past decade, for example, the top legislature passed the nation’s first Civil Code, with intensified efforts in making and revising laws involving national security and environmental protection, he added.

The top legislature safeguarded the authority and dignity of the Constitution, strengthening reviews of normative documents, such as judicial interpretations and administrative regulations, to make sure they did not contradict the fundamental law, according to Wang.
All roads lead to Tibet

By Yuan Yuan

Moving to Tibet Autonomous Region for the long haul is quite unlike enjoying the place through pictures or traveling there as a tourist. It is not for the faint of heart. Under the glittering blue sky and fluttering prayer flags, oxygen scarcity, altitude sickness, potential sunburn and inconvenient transportation are just some factors that would deter many from making the move or even just visiting.

Soccer players celebrate a victory in the Mass Cultural and Sports Center of Lhasa in southwest China’s Tibet Autonomous Region on May 11, 2018. Jigme Dorje
Since 1994, roughly 10,000 people have left behind their families in other parts of China to work in Tibet under a national pairing-up program, supporting the overall development of the autonomous region.

Since the Third National Symposium on Work in Tibet held that year, the Chinese Government has implemented the policy of pairing-up support for Tibet, whereby central state organs, 17 provinces and municipalities directly under the Central Government, and some centrally managed state-owned enterprises have paired up with various areas of Tibet to provide assistance.

For example, Beijing and Jiangsu Province have been providing pairing-up assistance to Lhasa, the capital city of Tibet. Shanghai, along with Shandong, Jilin and Heilongjiang provinces, China Baowu Steel Group and chemical firm Sinochem Group have been pairing up with Xigaze, the second-largest city in Tibet. Under the policy of pairing-up assistance for Tibet, 52.7 billion yuan (7.77 billion) was injected into Tibet through 6,330 projects between 1994 and 2020.

These people, mostly experienced officials, doctors, teachers and experts from various fields, work in almost every corner of Tibet—even the remotest of villages—for at least three years. They brought along their skills, technologies, ideas and anything that can spark positive change with one common goal—to make Tibet a better place.

Most of these “pioneers” have to part with family and friends and adapt to life in Tibet both physically and mentally. Some went to Tibet and returned, some stayed put and some passed away whilst working there. The policy’s implementation has generated the fastest development of Tibet in history.

Paving the way

Foshan, a city in economically developed Guangdong Province, sent its ninth team to assist Tibet about three years ago. Last year, the team helped Medog County create its first standard football pitch. They are going to help the county set up a football training base.

On June 12, the bus carrying the team was blocked by a landslide on the way from downtown Nyingchi to Medog, a county under its jurisdiction. The bus came to a halt on a narrow road with high cliffs on one side and the roaring Yarlung Zangbo River on the other. The scene that thrilled the accompanying journalist on the bus was nothing but a common sight for team members.

Foshan has been paired with Medog since 1995. At an altitude of 1,100 meters, Medog is in a much lower location than many other places in Tibet, but its geological features made it a hard nut to crack. Earthquakes, landslides and flows of debris are common in this area, often disrupting power and water supplies. It was the last county in China to have a paved road. It took some 40 years, from 1975 to 2013, to complete the county’s first road, due to frequent natural disasters.

The team eventually turned around and headed back to Nyingchi where they spent 22 days waiting for the rocks blocking the road to be cleared.

Even though Medog locals hardly ventured out of the mountains to see the outside world before, its relatively low altitude has always made it an ideal place for playing sports in Tibet.

“All the boys in my school love football but we never got the chance to play on a real pitch,” Wangchen Norbu, a 17-year-old from a village in Medog, said. “It is hard to find a large level field in my hometown and when we did find a small space to play, we always had to be careful not to kick the ball too hard or far as it would disappear into the mountains.”

“Among the 40 villages in Medog, there are 22 men’s football teams and four women’s teams that all spontaneously formed,” Xiao Zhiwei, a member of the ninth team from Foshan, said. The team contacted Evergrande Football School in Guangzhou, Guangdong Province, which is China’s largest school dedicated to nurturing young players.

“We told them how the kids in Medog love football and invited them to come and visit,” Xiao added. And so they did. In the end, several children, including Wangchen Norbu, were selected to attend the school and went to Guangzhou.

The team initiated a plan to create a standard football pitch in the county, a real luxury given the local conditions. They applied for a subsidy of more than 30 million yuan ($4.38 million), drafted an outline and worked hard to overcome all obstacles during its construction.

Finally, the pitch was completed in early 2021. The school went on to host its first game in the lead-up to Spring Festival, or Chinese New Year. Wangchen Norbu returned home for the game and was blown away. “I never expected Medog to ever have such a beautiful pitch. This is the best Spring Festival gift ever.”

Shortly after, the Evergrande Football School announced it would be establishing a training base in Medog.

Education, education, education

Education has always been of high priority in the pairing-up practice. After the road connected Medog with the outside world in 2013, the county now has its own kindergartens, primary and secondary schools and has also brought in more volunteer teachers.

Today, there are eight primary schools and one secondary school and all are paired up with quality schools in Foshan. Apart from teaching students, teachers from Foshan have also helped train local teachers and set up online classes, enabling Medog students to attend the same classes as their Foshan peers. The number of volunteer teachers from Foshan has increased over the past three years, from fewer 10 to over 40.

“As the state plans to construct a hydroelectric station on the Yarlung Zangbo River in the coming years, over 100,000 people will move into Medog for the project,” Xiao said, adding some of the construction staff will bring their kids to Medog so they need to make sure the school’s capacity can meet demand.

The Medog-Foshan story is just one example of the successful pairing-up model. More schools have budded across Tibet over the past two decades and exchanges between teachers and students from Tibet and other Chinese areas have greatly enhanced.

Medical services

The pairing-up model received several upgrades over recent years. In 2015, a new scheme was introduced to encourage the pairing of teachers and doctors and motivate more resources to lift the level of education and medical services in Tibet.

Wang Keming, a doctor from a leading plastic surgery hospital in Beijing, was the first plastic surgeon to go to Tibet under the pairing-up assistance policy.

Due to hypoxia caused by high altitude, dietary habits during pregnancy, and insufficient obstetric examinations, some Tibetan infants suffer congenital malformations that need to be treated with plastic surgery. Within one year, Wang performed more than 200 surgeries on patients with harelip and cleft-palate deformities.

Operations aside, Wang applied for the establishment of plastic surgery departments in Tibetan hospitals as well as trained local doctors. Today, the People’s Hospital of Tibet is capable of carrying out such plastic surgeries.

Sun Shuxue, head of Beijing’s seventh medical team to Tibet and a doctor at Beijing Friendship Hospital, has spent the past three years to bring high-quality medical resources in Beijing to Tibet, increasing the number of assisted departments in Lhasa People’s Hospital from four to nine.

Thanks to more medical personnel and resources, the hospital has been able to introduce many new physical therapies such as the correction of hip deformities in children.

A large number of local doctors, with the help of assisting experts, have carried out complex operations such as stent implantation for treating acute myocardial infarction.

Nima Tsering, a doctor in the emergency department of Purang County People’s Hospital in Ngari Prefecture, has mastered appendectomy, breast benign tumor resection, closed thoracic drainage, and other common surgical procedures by learning from doctors from Shaanxi Province.

By the end of June, seven groups of more than 1,300 medical professionals assisting Tibet had trained more than 2,400 doctors in the region. At the same time, hospitals in Tibet dispatched 1,800 local medical professionals to their paired provinces and municipalities for further studies.

By late 2021, more than 400 serious diseases could be treated without patients leaving Tibet, and more than 2,400 moderate diseases could be treated without patients having to leave their city. Moreover, average life expectancy in Tibet had risen from 68.2 years in 2015 to 72.19 years.

Oasis of vegetables

Along with Tibet’s medical and educational improvements, average living standards, too, have been lifted. Nowadays, it’s common to see tropical fruits and various vegetables at local supermarkets.

Zhang Jiming, a 59-year-old man from Shandong Province who has been living in Bainang County of Xigaze City for 22 years, has witnessed how Tibet has evolved from a barren land to a green haven.

Different from those who had to part with family and friends to go there, Zhang has been able to have his wife with him ever since he first came to Tibet in 2000 at the age of 37. His primary task then was to help villagers plant vegetables.

“She never thought my life would be linked with Tibet,” he said. Transportation was pretty bad in 2000. There were no trains to Tibet and the couple, traveling by bus, had to make several transfers.

“When I finally set foot in Tibet, the conditions were much worse than I had expected,” he said. “The roads leading to the village were unsurfaced. Most villagers never ate any vegetables, and had never even seen cucumbers or tomatoes.”

His greenhouse plantation project didn’t exactly get off to a good start. Locals would throw stones at him and broke down his greenhouse—as they’d only eat mutton, beef and highland grain. Any green leaves they’d get from the farm, they’d use to feed their cattle.

With financial aid coming in from Shandong Province, Zhang set up greenhouses for the villagers to use for free and offered free training. And his efforts paid off. Bainang has since become a major vegetable producing area in Tibet and with more roads and railways built across the region over the past decade, the county’s produce now travels far and wide.

Many other products from Tibet, including medicinal herbs, paintings and handicrafts, have all been shipped to many other areas.

At a conference about pairing-up support for Tibet on August 18 in Beijing, Wang Yang, a member of the Standing Committee of the Political Bureau of the Communist Party of China (CPC) Central Committee, who heads a central coordinating group for Tibet work, used the word “unprecedented” to describe the efforts and achievements that the pairing-up support work has exerted and made since the 18th CPC National Congress in 2012.

After the 18th CPC National Congress of the CPC, the Party convened each year a conference dedicated to anti-poverty efforts in Tibet for five successive years. More measures were rolled out, including a campaign under which more centrally-administered state-owned enterprises were asked to assist Tibet in achieving prosperity.

Figures from the Tibet Autonomous Regional Government show that from 2012 to 2021, the annual regional GDP increased from 71 billion yuan ($10.37 billion) to 208 billion yuan ($30.37 billion). People are seeing fatter wallets, with rural residents’ per capita disposable income maintaining double-digit growth for 19 consecutive years. The roads stretched from 65,200 km to 120,700 km.

Average life expectancy in Tibet has increased from a mere 35.5 years in 1951 to 72.19 years in 2021. Tibet is the first provincial-level region in China to provide 15 years of publicly funded education, from kindergartens to senior high schools.

Xiao has returned to Foshan and passed the baton to the next team. Wang Keming travels to Ngari Prefecture, the highest prefecture in Tibet, from time to time to offer locals free medical treatment including surgery. Zhang still runs his greenhouses. “I’ll stay in Tibet till I’m too old to work,” he said.

As the old Tibetan wisdom goes, “When he took time to help the man up the mountain, lo, he had scaled it himself.” (Beijing Review)
Nine years ago, President Xi Jinping proposed the Silk Road Economic Belt and the 21st Century Maritime Silk Road in Kazakhstan and Indonesia, respectively.

That is how the Belt and Road Initiative (BRI), which aims to build a trade, investment and infrastructure network connecting different regions along the ancient trade routes, took shape.

Nine years on, the BRI has achieved more than connectivity. Belt and Road cooperation, following the guiding principles of extensive consultation, joint contribution and shared benefits, has grown into a global platform where countries along the routes work together to promote people’s wellbeing and give a further boost to global development amid daunting challenges.

After years of Belt and Road cooperation, a general connectivity framework consisting of six corridors, six connectivity routes and multiple countries and ports has been put in place. Landmark accomplishments include the Mombasa-Nairobi Standard Gauge Railway in Africa, the China-Laos Railway in Asia, the new Haifa Port in Israel and the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor, among others.

In addition to infrastructure projects, a new logistics channel between Asia and Europe has been established through China-Europe freight train services. With 82 routes, the trains now reach 200 cities in 24 European countries, forming a transport network covering a large part of Europe.
Now, rice production in the demonstration area of Nariou village is double or triple the output of previous years, and the rice quality is also significantly improved.

This is just a microcosm of how Belt and Road cooperation has improved people’s wellbeing around the globe. By the end of 2021, China had built 79 zones for economic and trade cooperation in 24 countries along BRI routes, investing 43 billion U.S. dollars and creating 346,000 local jobs, according to the Commerce Ministry.

In addition, more projects focused on the basic needs of people in developing countries have been prioritized under the BRI framework. In Senegal, a rural well-drilling project, consisting of 251 wells and 1,800-km water pipelines that China pledged to fund, has brought clean water to one-seventh of Senegal’s population. Meanwhile in Argentina, the photovoltaic plant in the country’s northern province of Jujuy powers some 160,000 homes.

A World Bank report predicted that BRI transportation projects could help lift 7.6 million people out of extreme poverty and 32 million people out of moderate poverty globally by 2030.

Closing development divide

The world today is undergoing a sea change amid a lingering COVID-19 pandemic, sluggish global growth, climate change and escalating tensions. Great strides have been made toward global prosperity, but the gap between the richest and the poorest countries continues to widen.

However, reducing destitution is not enough. To improve equity and social justice, countries need to be equally entitled to development opportunities.

Upholding that spirit, the BRI offers an open platform and a win-win mechanism. By the end of July 2022, China had signed more than 200 BRI cooperation agreements with 149 countries and 32 international organizations, according to China’s National Development and Reform Commission.

“For the Belt and Road Initiative, it (China) has brought new thinking about development from being mere loan recipients to actual projects on the ground that bring development through trade and enterprises,” said James M. Njihia, dean of the Faculty of Business and Management Sciences at the University of Nairobi.

“This will have great multiplier effects in the future by increasing local, regional and international integration,” he added.

Echoing the same view, Khairy Tourk, professor of economics at the Stuart School of Business at the Illinois Institute of Technology in Chicago, said the BRI puts developing nations on the right track to achieve their long-term development goals.

Since infrastructure has not been the main focus of post-1945 multilateral institutions, Tourk said, “The BRI has drawn world attention to the importance of infrastructure as an essential pillar of economic development.”

For decades, these countries couldn’t modernize their antiquated infrastructure, he said. “Now China is providing funds and the construction expertise to build modern infrastructure. This is the basis for sustained development and bodes well for the economic future of developing nations.” (Xinhua)

Poverty reduction

In the eyes of Lewis M. Ndichu, a researcher at the Nairobi-based think tank Africa Policy Institute, one of the BRI’s contributions to the African continent has been poverty alleviation and agricultural development.

China set up poverty reduction projects, sent agricultural experts to Africa and facilitated modern agro-technology exchanges between the two sides, which has been significant to regional development, he pointed out.

Burkina Faso is among the countries that have seen the changes brought by the BRI. Chinese experts have helped increase its rice production, which in the past could barely meet the population’s needs.
